

A READING LIST FOR PEOPLE WANTING TO LEARN MORE AND BRING ABOUT A PARTNERSHIP BETWEEN CULTURES IN THIS COUNTRY

The Treaty of Waitangi

by Claudia Orange.

This book won the Goodman Fielder Wattie book award and gives you the historical understanding of the Treaty.

The Story of A Treaty

by Claudia Orange

An easier book than her earlier book "The Treaty of Waitangi".

The New Zealand Wars

by James Bellich.

Extraordinary information about the wars for land!

Waitangi: Maori and Pakeha Perspectives of the Treaty of Waitangi

Edited by Hugh Kawharu.

There are two sides to every story.

Ask That Mountain

Hine mann / Southern Cross Auch.

by Dick Scott.

The story of Parihaka. If you only read one book off this list, make it this one. It contains the worst of our history since contact as two cultures — but also the seeds of the best this country is capable of for the next millenium.

Makareti

by Maggie Papakura.

Maggie was brought up in Rotorua and this is her account of old time Maori ways for her thesis at Oxford. This is one of the few historical books about Maori by Maori and is, in my opinion, essential reading.

Te Puea

by Michael King.

Te Puea is one of this country's great people, an extraordinary woman. Her story is easy to read and when I read it I thought, "if kids read this at school instead of 'Moby Dick' maybe our country wouldn't be in such a muddle."

Healing The Breach

by Hiwi Tauroa.

One Maori's perspective on the Treaty of Waitangi, looking squarely and positively at the future, highlighting the directions which all races in New Zealand could follow with accord and goodwill.

Between The Lines: Racism and the New Zealand Media

Edited by Paul Spoonley and Walter Hirsch.

If mainstream media is your only way of finding out what's happening in this country — then read this book and see what kind of unpicking you may need to do!

Tau Tohetohe: Years of Anger and

Struggle Without End

by Ranginui Walker.

For me, anything Ranginui Walker writes is sharp, sets me thinking, and increases my awareness and understanding.

Honouring The Treaty: An Introduction for Pakeha to the Treaty of Waitangi

Published by Penguin.

A collection of writings in both historical and modern contexts, written by and for Pakeha.

The Treaty-makers of New Zealand

by Alan Lambourn.

Three very different men, the devout missionary, the Rev. Henry William; civil servant James Busby; and the naval hero Captain William Hobson, New Zealand's first Lieutenant Governor, had one aim ... to bring order, stability and justice to all people in New Zealand (as they understood it).

A Question of Honour? Labour and the Treaty 1984 - 1989

by Jane Kelsey.

By 1984 two revolutions were underway in New Zealand — one economic — the other Maori ... The newly elected Labour Government pledged to recognise the Treaty while introducing Rogernomics at Breathing Speed. The two revolutions were set to collide.

Amiria

and Eruera

by Anne Salmond.

Beautiful stories woven by the lives of Amiria and Eruera Stirling. I think you'll also enjoy another of Anne's books, Hui.

And watch for

Whaia Te Maramatanga

by Ruth Tai

to be published early 1992. This book looks at the ancient wisdoms of the Maori in relation to current education, physics, brain, ecological research. Mind blowing!
